Post-Doctoral Fellowship in Public Health

Main Project: In COVID-19 era: sexual initiation, socialization and risk exposure of youth from public high school

Principal Investigator: Cristiane da Silva Cabral

Description

This postdoctoral fellowship is part of the project “In COVID-19 era: sexual initiation, socialization and risk exposure of youth from public high school”, funded by FAPESP in the Fast Track Implementation of the UN-Research Roadmap COVID-19. This study is a cooperation between researchers from Brazil-United States-France, which aims to investigate how socioeconomic and gender inequalities, exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic, have marked youth sexual initiation and the dynamics of social and sexual interactions, with impact on SARS-CoV-2 prevention. Understanding how young students from public high school face violence and discrimination associated with gender and sexual orientation in their experiences with sexuality is one of the objectives linked to this post-doctoral fellowship.

Requirements

Brazilians or foreigners candidates fluent in Portuguese may apply. It is recommended that the candidate should hold a PhD in Social Sciences or a related field, and have theoretical knowledge and research experience in issues related to youth, gender and sexuality. It is equally important that the candidate has expertise in empirical research of a qualitative or ethnographic nature. Proficiency in English is desirable. It is necessary that the candidate is available to work in person in São Paulo city. Please consult the link <https://fapesp.br/bolsas/pd> for more information on FAPESP's eligibility criteria for Post-Doc.

Conditions of the fellowship

The selected candidate will receive a FAPESP Postdoctoral Fellowship in the amount of R$8,479.20 (~US$1,700.00) per month and a contingency fund for research, equivalent to 10% of the annual fellowship amount, to be spent on items directly related to the research activities.
